Club Women Told How Girls' Center Is Run

Elmira and Poughkeepsie Establishments Described, Officers Are Elected and Legion Camp Plan Is Explained By Chaplain Mabry.

The city of Elmira realized that it had a big civic problem, especially a problem with regard to its girls and women, and Elmira, during the past fourteen years has magnificently solved that and a host of other problems very successfully.

The city of Poughkeepsie saw the need of looking after its young women, nearly forty years ago and instituted a Y. W. C. A. which has been and is successfully caring for that need. Neither community said: "Oh! We can't have any such problem in our city so why worry about it, make ourselves aded work to investigate and, if necessary, do something." Each city knew its own need; stiffened its backbone; tackled the necessary job; and each has accomplished a vast deal for humanity.

So much was learned on Saturday afternoon from the two women who addressed the Federation of Women's Clubs and their friends at the open meeting of the federation held in the chapel of the First Dutch Church.

But before the speakers were heard, the Federation held its annual business meeting.

Mrs. Rice, president of the federation, presided. The secretary, Mrs. Harry Walker, and treasurer, Mrs. H. P. Van Wagenen, read their annual reports, and very brief reports were given by the affiliated clubs and the federation committees. One new member was received into the federation, Mrs. Carlton Preston.

Instead of giving an annual report of what the public health committee of the federation had done the past year, Dr. Day, chairman of the committee, presented the following matter, the women voting unanimously to pass the resolution offered by Dr. Day:

The Milbank Memorial Fund has recently become available for use in tuberculosis demonstration work Mrs. Elizabeth Milbank Anderson administered this money many years herself, very quietly, but on her death a few months ago the foundation in memory of her father Jeremiah Milbank was created. It was then discovered that one of her notable achievements had been financing the Troudeau Research Laboratory in the Adirondacks, many years ago, and which has added so much to human knowledge, about the treatment of tuberculosis.

The trustees of the foundation were left absolutely free as to the kind of disease investigation which they were to make. It could be cancer, cholera or any other disease but on account of her own very great interest in tuberculosis it was decided to study this disease first.

The Framingham demonstration has shown that in a small city of about 16,000 the death rate has been cut 67% in five years. In order to determine whether the same results can be secured under other conditions, the foundation decided to make three tuberculosis demonstrations, in New York state, to cover a period of five years.

First: A rural county demonstration in some county not under 45,000 nor over 75,000 in population.

Second, a city demonstration in some city of 75,000 to 100,000 population.

Third: A demonstration in some congested area of a first class city. It seemed better to work through existing agencies rather than to create new ones, so the Tuberculosis Committee of the State Charities Aid Association has been chosen to conduct the demonstration. The expense is estimated at between four and five hundred thousand dollars.

As the population of Ulster county makes it eligible to be chosen, for the rural demonstration, and the cooperation of the people is to be a decided determining factor in the choice I would like to introduce the following resolution.

The Kingston Federation of Women's Clubs, wishes to place itself on record as heartily in favor of applying to the Milbank Memorial Foundation to have Ulster county the location of their rural tuberculosis demonstration. The great amount of tuberculosis, in this county and the fact that Ulster was the pioneer county tuberculosis hospital makes this a very fitting location for the rural demonstration. In case this county is chosen. The Kingston Federation of Women's Clubs pledges its loyal support and cooperation to the demonstration.

Mrs. H. P. Van Wagenen, chairman of the anti-tuberculosis committee of the Third District, in reporting on the work of that committee, expressed sincere gratitude to all of the Federation women who had or are helping to give such inexpressible joy to the patients at our tuberculosis hospital through the entertainments held there each month, after they serve ice cream and cake.

As the conference of the State Federation of Women's Clubs will be held in the fall before there is another meeting of the Kingston Federation the second week in October at the Hotel Commodore in New York city, the delegates and alternates for the conference were elected as follows: delegates, the president, Mrs. G. F. Rice, Dr. Mary Gage-Day, Mrs. H. P. Van Wagenen, Mrs. Edgar N. Palen, alternates, Mrs. Hyman Roosa, Mrs. A. Ray Powley, Mrs. Harry Walker, Mrs. Frank Thompson. Mrs. Rice then gave her annual president's report as follows:

During the year we have held an executive meeting every month since the third Thursday in September. Four open meetings have been held, three included the regular business sessions and a program presided over by the president of the entertaining club or the chairman of the committee. At these meetings good speakers are provided, thus giving the public the benefit of the club's work and study.

Those entertaining the past year were the Atharhacton and the Monday Clubs. The public health committee and the Federation. During the year we have lost two of our active members by death. Mrs. W. Scott Gillespie, our second vice-president, one of the first members of the Federation of Women's Clubs, and for many years a member of the executive board. Mrs. DeWitt Roosa, a charter member of our organization.

One new club, the Olympian, a literary club of twenty members, and four individual members have joined the Federation this year. We have committees on public health, community service, legislation, Americanization, publicity, motion pictures and the care and education of the blind.

We have two members on the city board of health and one on the city board of education, and a representative on the Young People's Welfare committee.

We hold an organization membership in the chamber of commerce and many of our club women are members of the city committee of the Ulster County Home Bureau.

We cooperated with the chamber of commerce and the Ulster County Farm and Home Bureau in the community picnic held at Forsyth Park last August.

The club women responded to an appeal from the Red Cross and furnished several hundred wash cloths for hospital use. In November we entertained the women of the third district for the fall district meeting. The club women again conducted the Christmas seal sale for the benefit of tuberculosis work in our city and county. About $1,700 was raised. The women made a house to house canvass thus eliminating the expense of postage, stenographers, etc.

Our constitution calls for educational and philanthropic work. We have made our chief effort this year along civic lines, holding a concert in the high school auditorium. The net receipts of this concert to be used for civic community work.

Before closing this brief report I wish to express my thanks and appreciation to the executive committee and to every member of the Federation for their loyal support in all our undertakings. It has been said that "The key than unlocks the door of success in all mutual enterprises is cooperation." Whatever success we have had in our rank the past year has been due to the splendid cooperation of the members of the Federtion.

It has been a privilege and a pleasure to serve as your president. Always sensible of my responsibility to the Federation, I have done my best to conscientiously discharge the duties of this office.

Respectfully submitted.
JESSIE E. RICE.
President.

Following the president's report which was received with hearty applause, Mrs. Van Tassell, the chairman of the nominating commitee reported as follows: Nominations for president, Mrs. G. F. Rice; first vice-president, Mrs. Edgar N. Palen; second vice-president, Mrs. William A. Warren; recording secretary, Mrs. Harry Walker; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Hillis; treasurer, Mrs. H. P. Van Wagenen. All nominees were unanimously elected and Mrs. Rice expressed her appreciation of the honor again conferred upon her and promised her utmost of loyal service to the Federation for the coming year.

Father Mabry Speaks.

The women of the federation had been desirous of gaining some firsthand and definite knowledge of the mountain camp for sick and disabled soldiers in the Adirondacks, and to this end had voted to ask the Rev. Gregory Mabry to tell them briefly of the American Legion project.

These are the facts as Father Mabry gave them. The reason for this camp is that there is not yet sufficient hospitalization, especially for convalescent men, to care for all of our still disabled ex-service men needing such care. Nor is this entirely due to the government, nor to

MESEREAU HIT BY AUTOMOBILE

Isaac T. Mesereau of 113 Spring street, for many years an employe of The Freeman Publishing Company, was run over by an automobile of Percy Taylor of Port Ewen at the Rhinebeck ferry shed Sunday afternoon, the car backing into him just after he had said goodbye to his son-in-law, Chester Phelps of Cold Spring. Mr. Phelps heard his cry and jumped off the ferry which was just about to leave.

At the recent "moving-up day" exercises at the State College at Albany, Miss Agnes Scott Smith, of the class of 1918, K. H. S., was one of eleven members of the incoming senior class to be chosen members of Myskania, the highest honor which the college can confer upon a student. Myskania is a national society of teachers' colleges which corresponds to Phi Beta Kappa in other colleges, and appointment depends upon both scholarship and active interest in all college affairs. It was largely through Miss Smith's efforts that the college music association was founded and placed upon a sound financial basis. This association has brought to college the finest musical talent obtainable. In addition to this, Miss Smith was for two years leader of the Debating Team, secretary of Dramatic and Art Association; two years an editor of the Quarterly, the college literary magazine; a member of the college finance board, and has recently been elected editor in chief of the Pedagogue, which is the college year book.

Miss Dorothy Dangremond, formerly of Kingston, and a graduate of K. H. S. 1919, was also elected to Myskania, and Jacqueline Monroe, K. H. S. 1921, of the college class of 1925, was elected secretary of the College Students' Association, which is the highest honor which the college can bestow upon a sophomore.

SHIVERY DEATH MYSTERY SOLVED

Superintendent Fred J. Baker of Knickerbocker Ice Company Clears Up Mystery Surrounding Death of His Horse Matty—A Strange Electrocution.

"Is this you Mr. Baker?" asked the voice of John Schrader over the telephone to Superintendent Fred J. Baker of the Knickerbocker Ice Company on Friday afternoon.

Mr. Baker assured the voice it was he and, the voice continued: "Matty, your horse is dead."

"What's that?" asked Mr. Baker in surprised tones.

"I had him out grazing," explained Mr. Schrader "and when it looked like we was going to have a heavy storm I was leading him to the barn and just as we got near the barn Matty stood still and began to shiver all over and then he dropped dead."

What caused the death of Matty? That was the question that Superintendent Baker set himself to solve. First he called up Dr. J. A. Huhne, the veterinarian, and explained Schrader's description of Matty's death, and asked Dr. Huhne his opinion. Dr. Huhne replied that it was hard to decide off hand.

Saturday Mr. Baker sent for the bone factory man to come and take Matty away.

Matty reposed on the ground at the foot of one of the poles of the Kingston Gas & Electric Company near the ice house at Kingston Point.

When the bone factory team appeared on the scene the driver drove them to where Matty lay, and as the team approached the spot they also began to shiver.

Mr. Baker, who was present, ran forward to see what caused the horses to act so strangely, and as he did so funny tingles ran up and down his legs. Glancing skyward he glimpsed the pole of the electric company on which was installed two transformers, and he was struck with a clue as to the strange behavior of the team.

"Hey, there," he hollered to the bone factory man "get your horses away from here if you don't want them killed."

The bone factory man, while not understanding what it was all about, obeyed orders.

Mr. Baker then sent for the electric company men, and the mystery was solved. The electric current had been running down the pole into the ground, and for a distance of several feet around the pole the ground was impregnated with it.

The mystery of Matty's death was solved. The horse had been electrocuted.

A queer thing about the affair was the fact that John Schrader, the ice company employe who was leading Matty past the pole at the time the horse died, appears to be immune from the electric shock. He walked over the ground several times, but the only time he could feel an electric tremor was when he laid his hand on the ground.

It is understood that the electric company will reimburse the ice company for the loss of Matty. The horse was named after the famous pitcher, Christy Mathewson of the Giants.

The electric company men made some necessary changes in the wiring, and the ground near the pole is again safe to walk upon.

Marines Guarded Mails in 1775.

The first authentic record of marines acting as mail guards deals with the marines of Connecticut from the city of Hartford, says the Paterson (N. J.) Morning Call. It occurred in May, 1775, when re-enforcements, together with mail dispatches and a chest containing 500 pounds specie, were sent to Fort Ticonderoga, which had been captured from the British a short time before. Owing to the difficulty of securing reliable guards a detachment of eight marines was sent to watch over the treasure and dispatches. According to a letter from Jesse Root to Silas Leano those marines were "well equipped and well spirited" and executed their task in excellent fashion.

DID THE JUDGE FORGET THE WITCH?

Bible Story of How Saul Procured Interview With Dead Samuel Contrasted with Judge Clearwater's Denial of Possibility of Spirit Communication.

To the Editor of The Freeman:

Sir:—With deep interest I have read the statement published in The Freeman on Tuesday given by Judge A. T. Clearwater of this city to a group of college boys concerning his opinion of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, whom he regards, he says, as "a man of disturbed mind."

Since opinions may differ and in this land of freedom one man's opinion, as yet, is as good as another's, I will refrain from comment on Judge Clearwater's opinion, but of his statements of fact I cannot let pass without challenge the following:

"There is not (says Judge Clearwater) nor has there been any communication between this world and the next. If you will stop for a moment to consider, should it be otherwise, we would have heard from Moses, Job, Socrates, Plato, Aristotle, Julius Caesar, Wellington, Napoleon, Washington, Lincoln and many others whose suggestions would have been of vast aid to humanity. Instead of hearing from the spirits of these great personages, the communications alleged to have been received from the spirit world are from nonentities and nobodies who gibber superlative and irrelevant nonsense."

Opinion being worthless unless founded on fact, I have the right to assume that the unqualified statements I have just quoted are correct beyond the peradventure of a doubt and that Judge Clearwater, having in mind the usual rules of evidence governing all cases, is quite ready to produce the proof of his assertions if called on to do so.

While I do not now call on Judge Clearwater to produce his proof, because we are simply before the court of public opinion and cases should not be tried in the newspapers before they reach the proper tribunal, I am constrained to set forth a few facts which he may have overlooked. Particularly do I refer to the Biblical episode of the Witch of Endor.

Briefly, and because I cannot express my thoughts in the elegant, ornate and chaste language of Judge Clearwater, I would say in describing the occurrence that while King Saul was fighting an opposing army, he got in a jam, and after he had been kinging for a while, having got the king job as the result of winning a crap game, he went to the Witch of Endor to have Samuel called back from the Great Beyond to get a few points. At first the Witch stalled—probably she wanted a bigger fee, a not uncommon thing when producing prohibited goods, and spirits were then prohibited—but when Saul threatened, she got busy and brought in Samuel's spirit, which talked sense.

The only authority I have for believing that there was a King Saul or a Witch of Endor is the Bible, which is authority for many other statements which I accept as facts, although personally I cannot prove them. The story is entertainingly told in the "First Book of Samuel, otherwise called the First Book of Kings," in the twenty-eighth chapter, to which I refer such of your readers as are not already familiar with it.

Judge Clearwater is an orthodox believer in the Bible and everything in it and he says spirits can't come back and that fake spirits talk nonsense.

The Bible says that at least one spirit came back and his talk doesn't seem to be nonsense.

Shall I believe the unqualified denial of Judge Clearwater in 1922 or the positive statement of the Bible, the part of which I refer to, having been written according to most Biblical historians about 1056 B. C.?

Judge Clearwater when in court considers it his duty to place certain constructions on certain facts and it is proper he should. Let me, then, place not my own humble construction on the Witch of Endor episode but that of a man whom I always have considered an eminent and talented minister of the Gospel, a man learned in the law of the Lord. I refer to the Rev. Thomas Scott, at some time rector of Aston Sandford, Bucks, England, whose exhaustive explanatory notes, practical observations and copious marginal references have extended the Bible to a set of from five to seven volumes, according to the edition. I have no doubt that "Scott's Family Bible" even yet can be found in more Ulster county homes than any other book.

Dr. Scott says: "Samuel had annointed Saul, and often counselled him for his good: and though Saul had neglected him during the latter part of his life, yet he now was convinced, that it was better with him when he regarded his advice. Nothing therefore could now satisfy him, but a conference with the departed prophet; and he being forsaken of God was so infatuated, as to suppose, that the woman, by means of her familiar spirit, could bring Samuel up for that purpose, even without the Lord's permission!—It is probable, that she expected to impose on Saul by some satanical apparition.

"It is much disputed, who it was that appeared on this occasion; for the whole narrative manifests that it was no human imposture. Many expositors, ancient and modern, have maintained, that it was Satan personating Samuel; though the text does not give the least intimation of it. It is, however, by no means advisable, to give those men any countenance, who, to support a favorite system, put a forced construction upon the words of holy writ, very different from their obvious meaning: and scarcely any of their interpretations can sound harsher, than the insertion in every place, where Samuel is mentioned, 'that it was Satan personating Samuel.' It is indeed argued, that the woman's incantations could have 'no power over a glorified saint,' but to this it may fairly be answered that neither could an evil spirit appear to her call, without the Lord's permission. Though the woman was not the cause of Samuel's being sent, Saul's inquiry might be the occasion of it. The word disquieted seems to be used merely in accommodation to the general notions of mankind on that subject; and the woman's surprise and terror proved, that it was an unusual and unexpected appearance, and not the ordinary effect of her art. It is, however, further urged, that the apparition's discourse tended to drive Saul to despair, which is one of Satan's temptations; and that it contained no exhortations to repentance, which were usual with the prophets. But to this it may be replied, that Elijah's message to Ahaziah, Daniel's address to Belshazzar, and even Christ's discourse in the presence of Judas, were equally calculated to drive each of them to despair; and equally void of exhortations to repent, and proposals of mercy.

"Saul had despised Samuel's solemn warnings in his life-time; yet now he hoped, as it were, in defiance of God, to obtain some counsel and encouragement from him; and why might God not permit the soul of his departed prophet to appear and confirm his former sentence, and denounce Saul's irrevocable doom? It was not beyond the power of God, nor, that I can see, at all unworthy of him; but rather a declaration of his immutable and irreversible truth and justice. Satan could not have predicted the several events, which came to pass accordingly, as far as we know, without being inspired by God to do so; and it would give far more countenance to consulting witches, to suppose that he inspired Satan to prophesy by them, than to conclude that Samuel was sent with this tremendous message from God, when Saul consulted one of them. Indeed, this would most powerfully discourage such attempts; and the request of the rich man in hell to Abraham, being entirely vain, is calculated to discourage praying to departed saints.

"The local situation of departed spirits is so concealed from us, that the circumstance of the spirit apparently 'arising out of the earth,' forms no real objection against its being the soul of Samuel; and the expression, 'shalt thou and thy sons be with me,' means no more, than that they should be in the eternal world. The transaction was suited to impress the idea of a future state on the mind of all who should ever hear or read of it; and it determined nothing about the different conditions of the righteous and the wicked. Upon the whole, there appears much solemnity in God's for once permitting the soul of a departed prophet to make his appearance, as a witness from heaven, and in sending him to confirm the word which he spoke on earth (evincing that the words of the prophets would surely take effect) and to sit in judgment upon a proud enemy of God, who foolishly sought encouragement in his impenitency, by the most atrocious crimes.

"This interpretation is certainly obvious, and suited to the apprehensions of the unlearned reader, and according to the general simplicity of the Scriptures; and nothing short of unanswerable arguments and objections, should constrain us to suppose, that when the Holy Spirit said Samuel, he meant Satan, not speaking by Samuel, as he did by the serpent and by the demoniacs; but actually counterfeiting his shape, and speaking with his voice, though Samuel was in every sense absent from the place.

"The venerable appearance of Samuel, or something which he spoke, convinced the woman, that it was Saul who consulted her. 'She perceived, by the reverence the spectre paid him, who he was; for so Abarbinel interprets it, he bowed with his face to the ground, in honor of Saul, whereby the woman concluded that it was the king.' Bishop Patrick. Thus, then if the devil personated Samuel, he worshipped Saul, not Saul him! A likely thing, truly, that either Samuel, or Satan personating him, should thus reverence Saul! It shows to what difficulties the supporters of the latter opinion are reduced. Saul's bowing down before Samuel, was not indeed an act of religious worship, any more than Abigail's bowing down before David. The answer of Samuel was in every respect suitable to his character, and to the occasion. It was entirely in vain for Saul to consult the servant, when the Lord was become his enemy; the Lord was only doing to him, or for himself, as he declared he would; and as Samuel knew him to be finally given up, he neither gave him counsel nor comfort. The woman first saw the appearance; but afterwards Saul seems to have seen it, as well as to have heard the words spoken. Some think that neither Saul's servants, nor the woman, heard what passed."

If I were inclined to ask questions, I might ask Judge Clearwater why we would have heard from Moses, Job, Socrates, Plato, Aristotle, Julius Caesar, Wellington, Napoleon, Washington, Lincoln and many others if there is or has been any communication between this world and the next. I might inquire why their suggestions would have been of vast aid to humanity. I might even venture to ask, for instance, how the generals mentioned would have advised army maneuvers of the present day as exemplified in the late World War—and which side they would have advised.

But I forego asking these questions, because, unlike Sir Athur Conan Doyle I have cultivated my reflective faculties to the exclusion, if the not atrophy, of the imaginative.

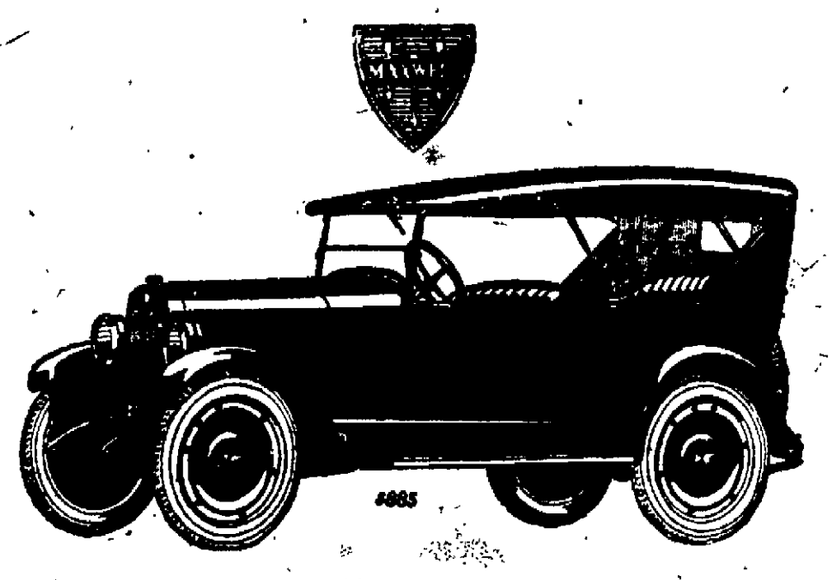

All I want to know, Mr. Editor, is this: Am I to believe Judge Clearwater when he says things ain't so, or am I to believe the Bible when it says they are?

Significant.

Some boys and girls were sitting beside one another in church recently. The congregation had been singing songs with which all were familiar. The pastor asked the congregation to name some other songs. A boy, apparently sixteen years, stood up and asked for the song, "Win the One Next to You."

RATES HIGH ON FARM PRODUCTS

The report of the joint commission of agricultural inquiry at Washington show the average freight rate on grain, hay, live stock, grass, cotton and other farm products is from 40 to 100 per cent above the 1913 level. Millard Davis, president of Ulster County Farm Bureau Association, said today. It means, he pointed out, a handicap to both those who sell and buy food. Figured in terms of transportation, the commission finds the farmer is suffering from a 72-cent dollar.

The commission, after investigating the situation for months, has decided to report to Congress that transportation rates on farm commodities are out of all proportion to the price and that immediate reductions in freight rates should be applied to farm products, Mr. Davis declared. This would be a benefit to both producer and consumer, he said, and would thus help to bring about a greater prosperity.

"Regardless of the distance involved," Mr. Davis quoted from the report "transportation charges must enable both carrier and producer to realize a profit from operations." The New York State Farm Bureau Federation is supporting the work to secure lower freight rates for farmers.

English Statesman's Nicknames.

Lord John Russell's diminutive stature earned him other nicknames besides the inevitable "Johnny." The neatest is the one recorded by Creevey, which was bestowed by some wag upon him when he married the widow of the second Lord Ribblesdale—"the Widow's Mite." John Russell was a frail and delicate child from the first, but his physique cannot have been helped by the hardship of his school days. He had to be taken away from Westminster because he could not stand the fagging and unwholesome food. And before that came a private school at Sunbury, where, as he recalled in later life, he found the mutton fat so intolerable that he dropped it under the table. But the master, a clergyman, made him sweep it up off the dusty floor and eat it, dirt and all.

The Old Nantucketer.

The Nantucketer, he alone resides and riots on the sea. . . . There is his home; there lies his business, which a Noah's flood would not interrupt though it overwhelmed all the millions of China. He lives on the sea, as prairie cocks in the prairie; he hides among the waves, he climbs them as chamois hunters climb the Alps. For years he knows not the land; so that when he comes to it at last, it smells like another world, more strangely than the moon would to an Englishman. With the landless gull, that at sunset folds her wings and is rocked to sleep between billows; so at nightfall the Nantucketer, out of sight of land, furls his sails, and lays him to his rest, while under his very pillow rush herds of walruses and whales.—Herman Melville.

When "Flappers" Used Snuff.

The flapper of 200 years ago had one besetting weakness that is not shared by her modern sister. The use of snuff was one of the petty vices of the young lady of fashion in the Eighteenth century. The practice elicited a roar of protest from a gentleman who wrote a letter on the subject in 1711. He tells of the conduct of a young gentlewoman in church, and declares "she pulls out her box in the middle of the sermon and, to show that she has the audacity of a well-bred woman, she offered it to the men as well as to the women who sit next her. Last Sunday, when they came about for the offering, she gave her charity with a very good air, but at the same time asked the church warden if he would take a pinch."

Easter and the Rabbit.

Nearly all the world over the hare is associated mythically with the moon, and it is on this account that the rabbit has so much to do with Easter. There has been much dispute as to why the hare should have anything to do with the moon, but nobody has arrived at any satisfactory conclusion on the subject. It is evidently a folklore notion of extreme antiquity, which partly accounts for its wide distribution. The rabbit is nocturnal in habit, coming out at night to feed, and that might have started the idea. It is asserted by students of such matters that the left hind foot of a graveyard rabbit, killed in the dark of the moon, represents the last quarter of the moon, and for that reason is lucky.

Art of the Story Writer.

Story-writing is always experimental, just as a water color is, and that something which does itself is the vitality of it. I think we must know what good work is before we can do good work of our own, and so I say, study work that the best judges have called good and see why it is good; whether it is, in that particular story, the reticence or the bravery of speech, the power of suggestion that is in it, or the absolute clearness and finality of revelation; whether it sets you thinking, or whether it makes you see a landscape with a live human figure living its life in the foreground. —Sarah Orne Jewett.

Healthy Complexion Assured.

Martha was a pale little wife whose white cheeks indicated her listless condition. Her husband worried about her lack of bloom till Cousin Helen came from the East for a visit. Martha improved wonderfully with bright companionship. Her husband was not slow to express his gratitude to his wife's cousin. "Helen, you can't imagine how much good your visit has done Martha. She looks ten years younger." "Well, I am so glad, Cousin George," Helen babbled. "And if she keeps on using that rouge I'm leaving her she'll always have that healthy complexion like mine."—Exchange.

To Clean Furniture.

Remove the dust from the crevices with a painter's brush with long bristles. Wipe the surface with a soft cloth wrung out of warm suds of white soap. When dry, pour a mixture of equal parts of turpentine and paraffin oil into a saucer, dip the paint brush in the mixture just wetting the tips of the bristles, and remove the surplus by squeezing the end of the brush for an instant in a piece of cloth. Go over the carved portions with this, and treat the plain surfaces with a little of the same mixture applied with a piece of cheesecloth. Finish by polishing vigorously with a piece of flannel or velveteen.

MORE SOCIAL HYGIENE MEETINGS NEXT FALL

Dr. Carro Croll of the State Department of Health has just finished giving four meetings on "Keeping Fit," to Home Bureau groups in the county, at Wawarsing, Ellenville, West Shokan and Bloomington. The meetings were well attended and the women greatly interested.

Arrangements have been made to have Dr. Croll come back to Ulster county in October, and an community will be set for that time shortly, after the Home Bureau officers as soon as possible.

Dr. Croll talks to women and young girls over sixteen giving instructions on how to best keep their bodies in the most healthful condition.

PROOF BY STATISTICS.

When social reformers of the official or volunteer type proclaim almshouse statistics to bolster up some pet theory, they overlook or ignore the institutions which in most communities have taken the place of the poorhouses which unfortunately were far too common a few years ago.

"Not many people go over the hill to the poorhouse nowadays," says the State Charities Aid Association in a recent statement, and the evident pride of the association is shared by every American citizen who possesses a trace of humanitarian instinct. Still, almshouses are a necessity. "The poor ye have always with you" is as true today as it was when uttered nineteen hundred years ago. The only trouble with the statement is that in all ages certain pharisaical individuals have regarded it as a biblical injunction and have used it as a personal conscience-salve with which to smooth work that pauperized other people.

The permanent population of all almshouses in New York state is a little over 10,000. In 1835 it was 6,457. In 1868, partly as a result of the Civil War, there were 53,497 inmates in the county, city and town almshouses of the state. The decrease in the number of poorhouse inmates is admitted to be due to the fact that these institutions are no longer the refuge of the dependent widow with her children, of the insane or mentally deficient and, as a rule, of the sick. The state and local governments' expenditure of millions of dollars for the care of such unfortunates elsewhere has diverted special classes from the almshouses, which today are occupied principally by old people who have not learned trades and who often are illiterate.

Among other causes which for half a century were urged as being responsible for pauperism and a large almshouse population was the use of liquor, wine and beer, and Prohibitionists promised a decrease in the number of almshouses with the advent of Prohibition. The decrease in almshouse population from 1868 to 1922 evidently was not due to Prohibition, any more than the increase from 1835 to 1922 was due to the use of liquor. Anyone who tries to argue otherwise ignores the hundreds of other institutions which have been erected and for which there is a growing demand even under Prohibition.

It is difficult to know what theory of social work can be supported satisfactorily by almshouse statistics. Life insurance advertisemnts declare that a large proportion of men who now at the age of thirty-five years are hustling for a living will be dependent at sixty-five, and if their statisticians are correct the conditions must be of such a character that present reforms will not change them. Almshouses may be abolished in time but there will be other institutions of a similar nature or more institutions specializing in the care of certain classes of unfortunates. To attempt to demonstrate a pet theory by the use of almshouse statistics is to ignore entirely the fact that reforms cannot prevent a certain number of residents of any community from becoming dependents through misfortune and through no fault of their own. People who ignore that fact simply prove the truth of the old saying that "Figures cannot lie—but liars can figure."

PROMISED EXPOSURES.

After our little fight with Spain in 1898 war frauds were promptly exposed and scandals of the "embalmed beef" variety were almost immediately aired. As nothing of the sort has happened during the three and a half years since the Armistice, the impression has naturally gained ground that there were no war frauds or scandals of much consequence during our vasty bigger military undertaking twenty years later. And yet at least some fraud in contracts would seem to have been inevitable amid the feverish haste, imperious necessities and imperfect supervisions of 1917. It was naturally expected that the Harding administration would promptly go through the records with powerful searchlights before which nothing could escape, but not until now is rather tardy announcement made of damaging discoveries and impending disclosures.

Attorney General Daugherty not only says he has uncovered war-contract frauds but makes the graver charge that they were "committed by sworn officers and employes of the government." He declares it will be shown that "influential personages in the government who had knowledge of these transactions and were in a position to make disclosures were personally interested in concealing them." Such an announcement should be followed immediately by complete publicity. There would seem to have been too much delay already, and to wait until the opening of the fall election campaign would invite the danger of a discounting of the evidence on the part of very many whose experience and observation incline them toward skepticism at such times.

Answers To Previous Questions.

1. Do any birds really carry their young?

Some of the aquatic birds whose young can swim as soon as hatched, occasionally "ride" the babies on their backs in the water, as loons and grebes. The old yarns about snatching up the young between the body and the wing are now discredited.

2. Does any snake, except rattlers, have diamond shaped marks?

Yes. The Diamond-backed water snake, Tropidonatus rhombifer. Its ground color is brown or olive, with a sort of netting of fine black marks, whose open spaces are diamond shaped.

3. Is there a fish in the sea that looks like a human being?

We fancy this correspondent has in mind the manatee, said to be the original of the mermai. It holds its young under its flipper, and will partly raise itself out of the water in what looks to be a sitting position which—at a distance—makes it look rather like a human being sitting on a wave. As for facial resemblance, anyone visiting a good aquarium must have seen many fishes with a ludicrous resemblance to humans. The Silvery Moonfish, also called Horsehead and Look Down, looks something like a serious person; so does the Schoolmaster, Neomaenis apodus.

OUR DAILY PATTERN.

A Pretty Style for a School Dress.

3860. For the frock that shall be a "little different," this design will be just right. It is in suspender style, and made to slip over the head. The gumpe is finished separately. Crepe or pongee may be used for the guimpe, and pongee, gingham, chambray or serge for the dress. The sleeve is attractive in wrist or elbow length.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. A 10 year size requires 2 yards of 27 inch material for the guimpe and 2¼ yards of 36 inch material for the dress.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 12c in coin or stamps by the Pattern Department, The Freeman, Rondout, N. Y. Be sure to state the size wanted.

"Why have I never married?" the confirmed bachelor repeated a leading question. "Well, once upon a time in a crowd I trod on a lady's gown. She turned, furiously, beginning, 'You clumbsy brute!' K. H. S. EASILY BEATS NEWBURGH

Find Their Batting Lamps for 14 Hits and as Result Still Have Chance to Retain Valley Championship.

Saturday afternoon the Kingston High School baseball team defeated the Newburgh Academy nine 12-4 at Newburgh. By winning the game of Saturday Kingston still has a chance to hold the Central Hudson Valley championship which has been held for two consecutive years by Kingston.

The game was a complete revelation to the high school boys in that all but two men gained one or more hits, Bott was hitting the ball all over the lot, Muller knocked a home run and Stumpf drove in three men with a pretty drive.

In the first inning the Kingston boys threw away their chance to score when a man was sent home from third and was met about three or four feet from the plate. Then when Newburgh took its inning Barton was scored on an error and the first inning closed 1-0. In the second inning Vogt scored for the locals tieing the tally. When Newburgh came in again Powers, the first man up flied to Muller, Lynch was struck out, and Kerr flied to third. Stumpf scored in the third and Muller made his hit, the home run hit, to deep center field and in such a way as to throw the fielder off his balance. Templeton grovelled about in the dust a while and gave Muller his chance to tag all three. Whiston was hit by the pitcher, but on essaying a stolen base, second to third, he was downed on a throw from Powers to Barton. Vogt tallied a hit but the next two men up, Hoffman and Bott flied out. Score 3-1. In the fourth Howard scored; in the fifth Vogt scored. Then in the sixth inning O'Callaghan chalked one for the Academy nine, the last tally by Newburgh until the finish of the ninth. The seventh inning was the traditional "lucky" one for Kingston, for the bases were wiped with five runs. Stumpf cleaned up with a three bagger. Four hits were made by the locals. Newburgh's catcher passed a ball letting in a run. The run getters for K. H. S. in the seventh were Whiston, Bott, Howard, McLane and Caunitz. The eighth inning went very quickly for both teams, but in the ninth both teams scored two runs.

Next week's game will be played between Williams High School of Stamford, Connecticut, and K. H. S. probably at the Fair Grounds as a preliminary game to the Colonial's match.

If Poughkeepsie High School defeats Newburgh High the next game, and if Kingston defeats Poughkeepsie and Newburgh the next two games, a championship match will be played between Kingston and Poughkeepsie, but should Newburgh trim P. H. S. and should Kingston win the next two games, the trophy automatically becomes the property of Kingston High School.

the service. New York State sent some 450,000 men and of that number among those who returned are many tuberculosis patients, who, however cannot prove absolutely that they contracted tuberculosis as a result of their service. Yet because of our patriotic and grateful desire to care for these men in the best possible way and also because we do not wish them to become a menace to the communities where they live, the people and especially the American Legion have felt the need of a hospital just for these men at this time. So at the Jamestown convention of the American Legion, a beautiful, large and suitable estate in the Adirondacks was acquired at a cost of $85,000. By the time The Freeman readers get this evening's paper the entire sum will have been paid. But it will cost approximately $50,000 a year to run a hospital of 100 beds, nearly $1,000,000 being required for initial equipment, first operating expenses, etc. There is now about $400,000 on hand for this work.

Of course the patients will be taken at first from the government hospitals, which cannot keep up convalescent hospitals, and those in the early stages will be given the first chance. Then as many as possible of the advanced or incurable cases will be admitted. And it means that with 100 patients there will have to be provision made for nearly 200 people, including nurses, orderlies and persons to attend to the maintenance and upkeep of the hospitals.

Of course it is not expected that these patients will be there for a long period of years, nor that the place will always have to be used in just that one way, if it can be sufficiently endowed to become a permanent institution, which is absolutely what is aimed at. When no longer needed as a hospital for tuberculosis it may become a home for indigent ex-service men who, for some reason or other have not made a success of life since seeing service in the world war. In order to erect the necessary new buildings and make the institution permanent about two and a quarter million dollars will be needed, and already, with practically no noise and with money very tight, approximately half a million dollars has been secured

Father Mabry then paid Wiltwyck Chapter, D. A. R., a splendid and deserved compliment for what they had already accomplished in behalf of the camp, having, as he expressed it, done surprisingly well. There were three ways in which Father Mabry thought the women of the federation could assist in this work Contributions of money could be raised—where possible units of a thousand dollars were being pledged, the entire amount to be paid in one or two years. Furnishings for the hospital would be most acceptable. When the housekeepers and home keepers are making jams and jellies this summer, if they will make just one extra each time for the Mountain Camp, that will "be a help." All felt that Father Mabry's talk had quite cleared up for them a rather vague impression of this work.

Federation or Civic Club House.

Before giving a report of the addresses given by Mrs. Frank H. Allerton of Elmira and Miss Mary Ellen Reed of Poughkeepsie, it may be well for us to remind ourselves that there are in Kingston approximately 3,500 girls between the ages of 16 and 22 years, and that of that number some 2,500 are employed girls. We know practically how they are employed, but how many of us know how or where, when or with whom they play; in fact how they live. Today that has, in spite of the fact that we do not realize it become a vital problem in Kingston. In order to have intelligent and ample information regarding how others had and are successfully meeting similar problems, the Federation of Women's Clubs had voted to expend a necessary amount from its civic work fund to bring to Kingston speakers who would be able to tell all about the work as carried on under an entirely uplift program and under a Young Women's Christian Association program. The first speaker introduced was Mrs. Allerton of Elmira, who without preliminaries —fortunately considering all she had to tell—described the Federation House at Elmira from "A to Izzard," as she has been asked to do.

Away back in 1905 Elmira awakened to the need of some sort of united charities movement after it was learned that one family consisting of five or six persons, two of whom were children had, one Christmas, received five turkeys, and not knowing what to do with them had raffled off all but one. And they also realized the need of a headquarters, a workshop, so to speak, for a combination of the charities of all the churches and philanthropic organizations. Also there were repeated calls from the police force at the various railroad stations, asking for assistance in looking after women traveling alone, young girls coming strangers to Elmira, etc., etc.

So it was determined to have a Federated House where all of the various uplift projects of the city could be housed, those paying rent elsewhere, paying rent into the new house, etc. In fact the men of Elmira would take hold of and heartily support the movement only, when they learned that the women would absolutely assume the responsibility of making the building pay for itself as it went along.

A drive for members was made, there being three kind of memberships; Active membership, $1 a year, (and it was tried to have every woman in Elmira such a member) which gave each member the privileges of the building; Associate membership, $5 a year; Sustaining membership, $25 a year and life membership, $100. Then a great charity ball was given for the benefit of the project, heartily supported by all of the Protestant and Catholic churchee and Hebrew congregations, and netting a very considerable sum. The one and only initial gift, was that of the lot, an entire block, given by J. Sloat Fassett. Then it was arranged that for the sum of $25 outside organizations might have the use of the auditorium, rest and dressing rooms and kitchenette for one entertainment each year, another good source of revenue.

In 1908, three years after the initiation of the movement the building was opened. There was a mortgage of $30,000. Right here it should be stated that the population of Elmira is about 50,000 people, Kingston's population being about 30,000 or 3/5 of that of Elmira. That point should be kept continually in mind while reading the remainder of this report, both as to money expended and work done.

From the yearly charity balls, enough money has been realized to reduce the mortgage to $9,000 at present. It costs $20,000 annually to run the place and that expense is a pay-as-you-go proposition. The Federation House is entirely officered by women, and for the Allied Charities a budget for one year is made out then multiplied by three, and every three years there is a drive to raise the budget for the next three years, with two and one half years in which to pay in the pledges.

It was first operated by the Women's Federation of Elmira, later changing its title to the Elmira Federation for Social Service, as the work changed and grew.

Now as to the activities being carried on in the Federation Building, which is 125 feet square, has three stories and a roof garden, and cost $130,000. The first small clubs for young people in Elmira were the Girls' Alpha Club and the Boys' Omega Club or Industrial Club, which rent rooms now in the House. This is the headquarters for all of the social service visitors employed for the city, and it is also the headquarters for the three visiting nurses who receive all their calls and instructions at their office. Part of the roof garden has been utilized as a day nursery where the mothers of twenty-five little tots leave the children while they take up their tasks as wage earners.

In Elmira there are twelve troops of Girl Scouts, who have their headquarters in the Federation Building Then there is the recreation room, the gymnasium where clubs of girls from the various industrial plants, from the high school, from no particular group of people meet and have their recreation.

And everybody pays something for their share of the building.

The cafeteria, begun in a small way, has grown to be so large and successful an institution, feeding men and women from all walks of life, that the original space allotted to it had to be greatly increased. It is decidedly a paying investment.

One very novel and apparently most useful department is the public laundry. Here, housekeepers without laundry facilities; women who do laundry work for others; girls boarding, etc., may take their laundry and if they use the electric apparatus they pay 15 cents an hour; if the tubs 10 cents an hour. Needless to say the laundry is never idle.

Then there are fourteen furnished sleeping rooms, where girls or women may secure lodging for two weeks, while securing work or a boarding or lodging place. And they will be helped to find both, or if they are not successful in so doing within the two weeks, there is sufficient elasticity to the rule to find some way of caring for them until they are placed. There are no vacant rooms.

The facilities for giving big and fashionable or small and informal parties are complete and in constant use by either the socially elite of Elmira, the "average citizen, and his family," or "employed girls." All pay something for the use of the equipment at their disposal, and wherever necessary dances are supervised. At one time when it was learned that dance halls, etc., were not properly supervised and dances were being held that were undesirable for the young people. the Federation House opened its doors for such dances, certain nights in the week during certain months, charging 6 cents admission.

Then there is a spacious hall with dressing rooms, 2 rest rooms, and 2 dining rooms, all available for a very moderate rental. From the time of its opening one corner of the building has been rented by a bank for which it was planned. The work has grown to such proportions now, that the bank has been advised of the necessity of seeking quarters elsewhere as that space is needed. And it was noted by Mrs. Allerton, that as the work grows, it changes, from time to time, and the women back of the project see to it that the possibilities of the Federation House grows with its needs.

The Kingston women were next told of the salaries paid out to the trained workers and care takers. The executive secretary has the highest salary, $2,000 a year and attractive, furnished room (estimated rental $5 a week). The financial secretary has $150 a month. The superintendent or housekeeper, has $50 a month, and a suite of furnished rooms, living room, bed room, bath and kitchenette and meals. The three janitors doing day service get $25 a week, each, and the night janitor gets $27 a week.

There is a house committee, composed of women who are home-keepers, either doing their own work or knowing how and having servants. They meet frequently at the building and minutely inspect it, so that it is always in spotless and highly sanitary condition throughout.

In closing Mrs. Allerton impressed upon her hearers the urgent necessity of educating a community to a realization of its civic and sociological needs and responsibilities in order to get the desired and necessary cooperation of all the people and further expressed the hope, that whatever plan Kingston might find best suited to its needs, it would speedily take up some sort of social activity for its girls and women.

Y. W. C. A. in Poughkeepsie.

The next and last speaker to be introduced was Miss Mary Ellen Reed, general secretary of the Y. W. C. A. in Poughkeepsie, who paid a fine compliment to the Y. W. C. A. work which Miss Sarah Horton of this city has done.

Miss Reed made it plain from the very beginning that the Y. W. C. A. was a voluntary organization looking after the spiritual life of girls and women, their education, employment, health, general welfare and uplift; that it was pre-eminently a Christian movement.

It takes a census of the girl problem in a community, looking up the girls, finding out where they are, whether in the home, school, factory or store; their nationality; their religious affiliation if they have any; the recreational facilities of a community, either connected with the schools, churches, clubs or in civic organizations. Then it looks to see how much and what other organizations are doing for the girls, and wherein it can cooperate. It visits the industrial plants, stores and offices, learning the ages and nationalities of the girls, and the attitude of their employers toward the Y. W. C. A.

The Y. W. in Poughkeepsie was started about forty years ago. The population of Poughkeepsie is about the same as Kingston and it has some 175 factories employing about 2,000 girls and women. When it started it was first housed in rooms over a factory, but 15 years ago, about the same time that the Federation House was started in Elmira, a new, up-to-date and splendid Y. W. C. A. building was erected on Cannon street. There was considerable objection to the building from some quarters and from some men, but already the back wall of that comparatively new building has been knocked out, and a new and large auditorium built, also a big roller-skating rink.

In Poughkeepsie that is the way they have met the dance problem. They have revived roller skating and introduced that in place of dancing, with marked success. It does not offer quite the same objections as dancing; is good exercise, enjoyed by both girls and boys and has become increasingly popular. And the rink is properly supervised as dancing should be. Bowling is also a recreation greatly enjoyed by the girls and women as well as by men.

The original building cost $38,000, the additional auditorium $30,000 which on its completion was paid for entirely by Mr. Smith of Smith Brothers. They hope soon to take up the matter of a woman's hotel in connection with their Y. W.

One particular feature of their work is with colored people. On Thursday night, which is the prayer meeting night for the Protestant churches the Y. W. is especially turned over to the colored girls and women and this project has been greatly appreciated and enjoyed.

Their budget has grown from $5,000 to $9,000 and their membership from 600 to 1,600. They have no cafeteria, in fact few financial resources but beginning with an endowment of $25,000 they have had several considerable endowments. Then they have many gift memberships, that is, people take out memberships asking that the Y. W. use those membership for some girl or girls who might not be able to afford to take out a membership yet who would be greatly benefited by joining the institution. Memberships in the gymnasium classes run from $2.50 to $5 a year. They have, as yet, no swimming pool, but they have shower baths in connection with their gymnasium.

While fees are accepted from outside clubs, and that money given over to the work of the institution, there is no charge for the entertainment afforded any girl. If girls choose to pay for their hospitality, it is accepted but not required. They have no indebtedness, the running expenses being kept up. The parlors are always open to young people, and girls who are strangers in the city are given especial care and consideration until properly located as to home and employment. In this work they have the co-operation of the police at the railroad stations, the Salvation Army, and particularly the Travelers' Aid Society.

Miss Reed gave a highly interesting account of how a girl coming to Poughkeepsie under what seemed strange circumstances, was brought into touch with the Y. W. She was kept at the institution for a few days and really entertained, while friends were being located, and finally Miss Reed accompanied her—unasked and evidently not wanted—to Albany where she learned that the girl had run away from home. Her parents were reached and the family united, in the process of which Miss Reed found that the mother, was a devout Catholic who had been sincerely praying that her girl would be cared for, and whose gratitude to the Y. W. C. A. was boundless. And Miss Reed then made it plain that the Y. W. was just as glad to welcome girls who were Catholics or Hebrews as those who were Protestants or, from a religious standpoint, nothing.

The Poughkeepsie Y. W. has a girls' Bible class of 300 girls and the suppers given the evenings of these Bible classes have never been changed from their original price of 10 cents and are very largely attended. Then they have a mothers' class numbering 150 women.

Miss Reed stood firmly in the belief that the need for Christianity to meet the responsibilities of the world today was paramount. The Y. W. C. A. is an evangelical institution, having on its boards of managers only Protestant Christian men and women.

A new project about to be undertaken in the Poughkeepsie Y. W. is that of a borrowing fund, from which girls needing money to complete or get a start in an education may draw. Then there are summer camps connected with the Y. W., to which any girls anywhere may go.

Miss Reed said she knew of the unique and magnificent work done at Elmira, which was so unusual that she did not know of another similar institution, but she herself was outspokenly in favor of the definitely Christian institutional work for girls. However, whatever plan seemed the most feasible for Kingston she emphatically expressed the hope that Kingston would at the first possible moment, after sufficiently careful consideration, put into active operation some plan of work in the interest of its girls and women.

Now the women of the Kingston Federation of Women's Clubs, having secured this much information for the benefit of the community, ask that the people of Kingston carefully read over this information; talk it over in their homes and places of business and clubs, both men's and women's, so that when another and larger meeting is called a little later, they may be prepared to offer intelligent ideas as to the best plan of doing something specific for the girls and women of Kingston.

Original "Merry Andrew."

The term "merry Andrew," which is today used more or less sarcastically to designate someone whose appreciation of his own sense of humor is not shared by the multitude, has its origin in a great wag of the time of Henry VIII, and who was also a very learned physician. His name was Andrew Borde, and he died in 1545. According to the historian Hearne, the original "merry Andrew" frequented markets and fairs "where a conflux of people used to get together, to whom he prescribed; and, to induce them to flock thither the more readily, he would make humorous speeches, couched in such language as caused mirth and wonderfully propagated his fame." Later on the expression was applied to any clown or buffoon, and more specifically to a jester in attendance on a traveling mountebank.

Volcanic Deposits.

There have been reported the results of physical, chemical and biological studies of the ash deposits in the Carib country of St. Vincent laid down at the time of the eruptions of the Soufriere in 1902 and 1903. The deposits, which range in depth from 14 to 18 inches, consist of coarse, sandy types. They show small contents of organic carbon and nitrogen, are extremely deficient in calcium carbonate and contain moderate amounts of available phosphoric acid and potash. They give evidence of a moderate activity of putrefactive bacteria. Nitrogen-fixing organisms of the Azotobacter type are present. The soil possesses appreciable nitrogen-fixing and ammonifying power, but no nitrifying power. Considerable progress has been made in the conversion of these sterile ash deposits into fertile soil.—Washington Star.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

MARY GRAHAM BONNER

FAIRY QUEEN'S ADVENTURES

"Well," said the Fairy Queen, "so many adventures as I've had today! In the first place of all, I've seen so many balloons.

"High Up in the Air."

"There have been pink ones and blue ones and red ones. Oh, balloons of all colors, and some of them got away from their owners, broke their strings and went high, high up in the air.

"I saw one fastened to a painter's scaffold, and it looked so pretty high up like that.

"They are so lovely," continued the Fairy Queen, "that I am going to give a Balloon Ball next week and I want everyone to come to it.

"Everyone must be dressed like a balloon and everyone must bring a balloon, too. It will be a beautiful ball, I'm sure."

"Oh, it will be a lovely ball," said the Fairies.

"But tel us the rest of your adventures," they added.

"Well," said the Fairy Queen, "I saw three fine boys named Tony and Joe and Marlio. They were busy playing checkers, and they had a visitor who came and played with them. Two played at a time, but Marlio beat all the others.

"I peeped behind a plant which was growing in the window and saw all these checker games. I like it when people have plants. Then I can see so much more, as I can hide behind the plants.

"I always carry my wand with me that I can wave so as to make myself small or big, as I choose.

"Then I saw a little girl whose father always calls her Mrs. Kittens.

"I asked how she had received this name and I was told that her father thought she was just like dear little kittens one wanted to hug and love and pet.

"I passed a quince bush which has been in a garden for years and years and years.

"'Are you going to bloom this year?' I asked. 'I mean by that, are you going to yield or give any quinces?'

"'I'm not sure,' said the quince bush. 'You know, I had a quince on my bush one year.'

"'You are forever talking about that one quince,' I said. 'I have heard about it for the greatest number of years, and I believe it is the only quince that was ever on your bush.'

"'You're right,' said the quince bush, 'but I still talk about it, Fairy Queen.'

"Then I saw some children and I heard them talking about the different tricks they had played on April Fool's Day.

"It seems they had stopped everyone and told them they had dropped some money, or that there was some money in front of them, and then they had said 'April Fool!'

"They had played it on each other, too.

"'Oh, see the penny coming out of your shoe!' one had said, and some one had stopped to look at such a curious sight when, of course, the child had called out:

"'April Fool!'

"I saw a little city garden, with trees coming out and showing that it was the springtime. There were crocuses already out and seeds had been planted and the trees were soon to be in bloom and would later have lovely leaves.

"I saw skipping and jumping games, and many, many games of marbles being played.

"And such fine rope-skipping as I saw! Oh, some splendid rope-skipping.

"Fine Looking Mud Pies."

"There were some fine chalk drawings that I beheld, too. Some of them were very fine and some were very funny.

"I saw my old friend, Beauty, who said she was still busy going her rounds and giving Beauty Sleep to folks to make them handsome. She is certainly handsome herself.

"And I saw sailboats in ponds, and even sailboats in mud puddles, and mud pies being made—fine looking mud pies.

"I saw a little seashore garden where there were big pansies and brown and yellow wall flowers out, and lovely double daffodils, too.

"But there! I've talked enough. We must make ready our invitations for the great Balloon Ball. Heigh-ho, heigh-ho for the great Fairyland Balloon Ball!"

Educated Dog.

"Lay down, pup. Lay down. That's a good doggie. Lay down, I tell you."

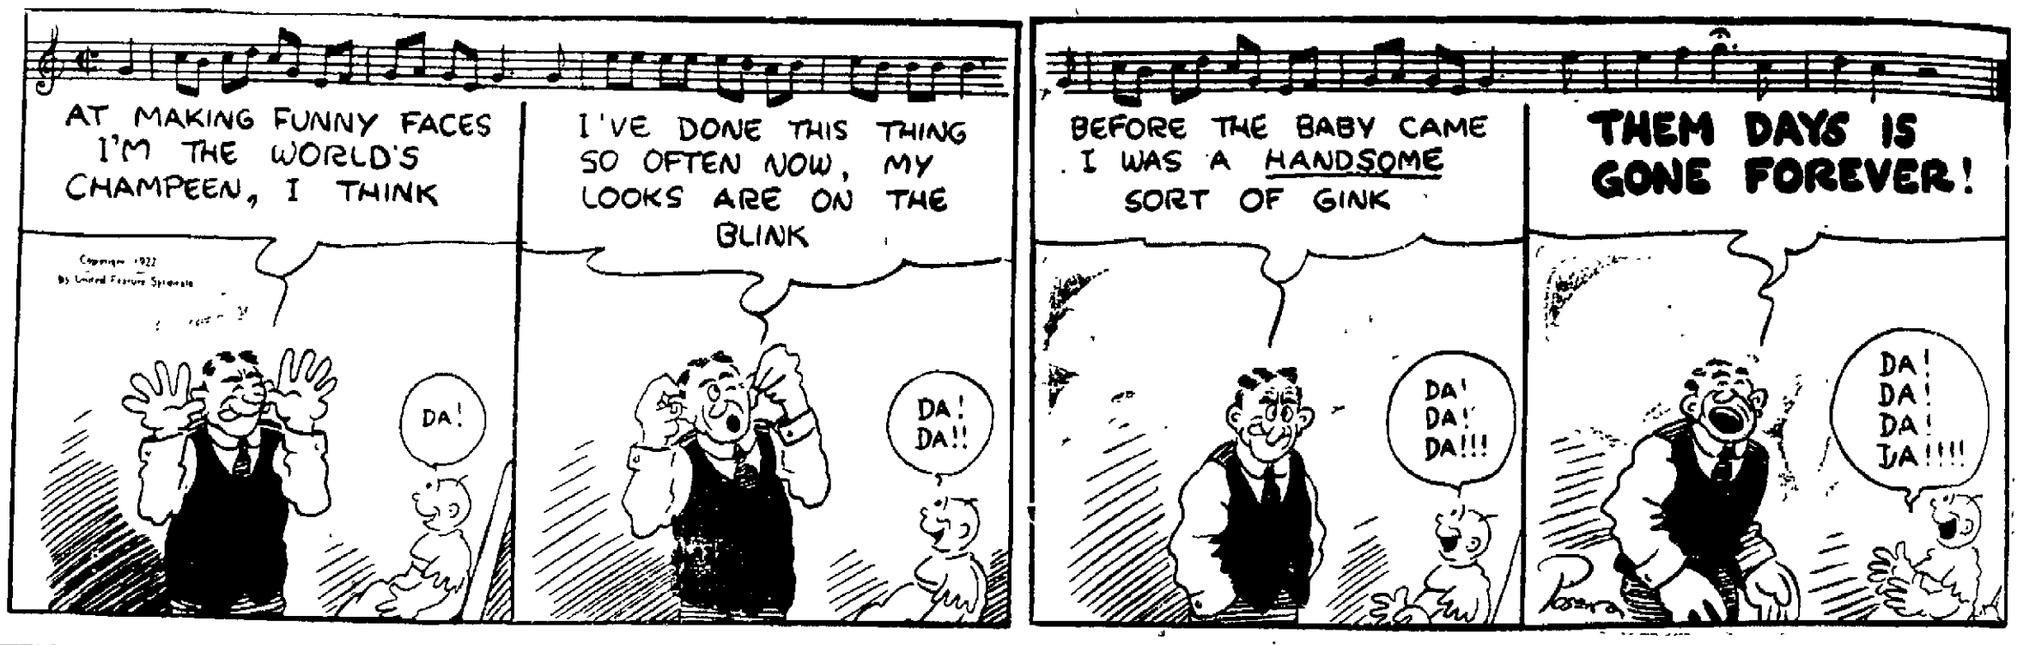

"Mister, you'll have to say 'Lie down.' He's a Boston terrier."

BRAN FOODS

Bran is a good brush for the alimentary canal and may be used in its uncooked form with any cooked breakfast food. Two or three tablespoonfuls of the bran will not be noticed in any cooked or dry breakfast food.

For bran mush, sift gradually one and one-half pints of fresh bran into one pint of rapidly boiling water, add one-half teaspoonful of salt and two-thirds of a cupful of stewed prunes, chopped, or dates or figs also chopped.

Bran biscuits are prepared like ordinary biscuit, adding one-third of bran in the usual measure of flour.

Bran Crackers.—Prepare a bran mush, let it cool, then work into it as much bran as possible for rolling out one inch thick. Bake well in a moderate oven.

Bran Cookies.—Cream three-quarters of a cupful of shortening with one and one-half cupfuls of sugar, add two eggs, one teaspoonful each of salt, nutmeg and vanilla extract and one-third of a cupful of sweet milk. Into this stir one pint of flour, one teaspoonful of baking powder and add enough bran to make a soft dough. Roll out thick and bake in a moderate oven. For spice cookies use brown sugar, flavor with nutmeg and sprinkle the tops with sugar and nutmeg or cinnamon. Put a raisin in the center of each cooky.

Bran Fruit Crackers.—Wash and dry one cupful of currants. Take two-thirds of a cupful of sweet cream, add one-half teaspoonful of salt, and sufficient bran and white flour mixed in equal measure to make a stiff dough. Divide into two parts. Roll out one-eighth of an inch thick, sprinkle with currants over half of the dough, lay the other on top and roll out again, pressing firmly. Cut out, prick well and bake in a moderate oven.

Bran Coffee.—To one quart of bran add two beaten eggs and one-half cupful of molasses. Chickory or other cereals may be added if desired. Mix well and place in a moderate oven till thoroughly dry, stirring meantime to brown evenly.

When Medical Men Say—"Chiropractic"

Monday Health Talk No. 85

When medical men advise chiropractic is when the history of the case is one that indicates an obviously spinal cause for the ailment. Usualy the case has an accident history. The sickness followed a fall or a severe strain of some kind which directly affected the spine.

But the fact about the spine is that it must pivot every motion of the body. In the living body it is a thing of utmost flexibility, and the twenty-four joints making up the three principal divisions of the spine are all movable and easily disordered by the every day activity of life. It is not necessary to suffer a severe accident to displace a joint of the spine, and when this happens it causes disease in the organ thus deprived of a normal amount of nerve impulse.

Uncle Ben Says:

Nevvy, you go out to the cemetery and you will find hundreds who one time expected to look after their health the following year.

PHYSICIAN SAID TRY CHIROPRACTIC

"I fell from a scaffold to a cement sidewalk. During the following eight years I consulted any physician whom I thought might remedy my condition, but relief was only temporary. In 1917 paralysis came as a result of the original injury and my physician said medicine could not help me and referred me to a chiropractor. I had been in bed five days unable to move when I received the first adjustment. After the third adjustment I was able to get up and walk to the office a distance of two miles. From then on my recovery was steady and after six months of adjustments I was permanently cured."—Fred Eberhart, Chiropractic Research Bureau, Sworn Statement No. 13395.

WHEN HEALTH BEGINS

When your health starts depends on when you telephone 776 for an appointment. Consultation is without charge. Our invariable rule is never to accept a case that we are not confident we can benefit.

We are graduates of the Universal and Palmer Schools of Davenport, Iowa—the world's foremost chiropractic colleges.

The system of painless adjusting originated by us is acknowledged far superior to any method heretofore in use.

THE DREAM OF LO-NE COME TRUE

Sleeping Brave Gorged With Venison First Visioned Rondout Creek Bridge a Couple of Centuries Ago, Writes Safford.

In early days, some three centuries nearer the dawn of time, a lone Indian, tall and lithe and straight, and named Lo-ne.—because that was not his name—returning from his annual plunge in the great waters of the sea, was making his way up the sunset side of the Co-ho-ha-ta-tea, the Iroquois's "great river with the mountains beyond"; at times following the shore along, again forced to take higher levels as the banks sloped sheer down to the water's edge; and from these heights he could scan his distant home-land, the "Onti-Ora—'mountains of the sky'" whither he was bound. And so he came to a place "where a creek comes in;" and here he paused, seeking a place to cross; when, on the farther shore, his keen eye saw a noble buck looking wonderingly at him. Quick as thought he drew an arrow, long and lithe and swift, and the arrow shot across the creek and found its mark; the wounded deer turned to flee; the Indian twanged his bow again and once again and the monarch of the forest was laid low on the other shore.

Lo-ne, the Indian, finding no bridge to cross the stream,—even the "Skillypot" was not running then—plunged into the water and swam across to claim his prey, for he was a-hungered and a-weary with his journey.

The Dream of the Bridge of Flying Arrows.

In the blaze of his camp-fire he broiled the steak of the deer, and his was a royal feast; then he quaffed the water of the stream, laid down upon the "bosom of mother earth" and soon was in the Indians' Land of Dreams.

For that night our Indian, Lo-ne, filled with contentment and tasty venison, dreamed a dream that after three hundred years has come true.

In his dream our Indian saw the flight of his arrows across the creek and then other flights of arrows followed each other in quick and rapid succession until the stream was bridged with a continuous flight of arrows from shore to shore; and on this bridge he thought to cross the water, when a bright ray of the morning sun the Indians' only alarm, with a primitive Big Ben stroke opened his eyes, he rubbed them again and again but the bridge was not there! It was but a dream!

A century made its yearly marks along the corridors of time and sturdy pioneers and settlers had come and gone; to cross the creek, these must needs use small boats or punt and scull, the Indian his log hewn or unhewn. Mayhap these people dreamed of a bridge to cross the creek—some day.

Another century or so hung its annual calendars along the lengthening corridor, and "small boats sailed the creek from side to side" as the years continued to go rolling on. And then! the "Riverside" came and made a "floating bridge" chained on either side, that ran within its slip from shore to shore. The Dutch called it the "Schildpaad"—a tortoise, but "Skillypot" sounds better and is just as slow. Still the folk dreamed on, dreamed of the bridge that crossed the stream, but only in the dream!

Further up the creek, before the age of steel, a wooden tunnel was built and man could cross above the tide; and this in later years was replaced by truss of steel; while in other years the West Shore came and built a railroad bridge high in the air. The dream was but partly true.

The Dream Comes True! 1921!

But man must cross the stream where he would cross, and so a great state was stirred to build a bridge to connect up the great highway running from coast to coast; so engineers planned a bridge of concrete, long and straight as the Indian's arrow; but, alas! 'twas a bridge on paper—the foundations were in the sand.

Then:—greater engineers designed and built a bridge of wire and truss and great cables of steel that swing from the tall towers in curving lines of beauty—a bridge that springs from shore to shore, high above the waters of the Rondout tide, and that is long and lithe and strong, and as graceful as the Flight of Arrows—the dream-bridge that our Indian saw in the long, long ago. The Bridge of Flying Arrows through modern skill becomes Arrested Motion Turned to Steel! The dream has come true!

The opening day, November 29, 1921, the governor of New York came down from Albany and clasped hands with the mayor of greater Kingston as they officially joined in the great rejoicing of the ten thousand at the bridge.

Before the city entrance, veiled by American flags, Louise, the Maid of Esopus, clasped hands with Ruth, the Maid of Kingston. These names are most significant: Louise, "bold huntress-daring archer" and Esopus hark back to the days of the Indians, the first Americans; and Ruth, "Beauty"—and the early "Indyan" name for Kingston was "Atharhacton—Beautiful Place" and this name will ever hold good of the Kingston of today—"Kingston, U. S. A."

The Bridge—A Dream in Steel.

"Louise Esopus" and "Ruth Kingston" clasped hands above the spot where three hundred years before our Indian, Lo-ne, shot the deer and then dreamed of the Bridge of Flying Arrows, and his spirit-in-the-air, this day, looks down from his Happy Hunting Grounds as the realization of his dream is revealed when the great flags behind the tableau of the union of Esopus and Kingston are drawn aside and the bridge—a great connecting link in the highway that runs from east to west of America—is thrown open to the tourists who come along the way blazed by the Inian, Lo-ne, so many, many years before, coming up the scenic, historic route along the Hudson of America, passing over that unique and wondrous four miles of highway that swings around up on the balcony of Storm King, 300, 400 feet above the river, on the way to the Catskills and out into the golden west; or to those who come from the west to see and visit nature's grand workshop where the early pioneers wrought out our history, and to see the architectural wonders and varied scenery of the east—and traveled tourists concede that the scenery here in picturesque Ulster, for wide range, for appealing and restful beauty rivals the rugged landscape of Switzerland and the scenic charm of the Yosemite; and to those who come to visit the far-famed resorts by the sea—all can cross the Rondout Creek Bridge,—a fifth of a mile of grace and beauty, three thousand tons of weight, and yet with it all a dream in steel!

Gentleman in His Heart.

Tom, with apparently a strong sense of chivalry, was invited to luncheon one day with a party of college girls. He reported with contempt that night at dinner that one of the girls had kissed him; but when his father asked who she was, Tom scornfully replied: "Mens don't tell."

When film-coats make teeth dingy

Pearly teeth which one delights to show

When teeth do not glisten

When film removal makes teeth shine

Teeth People Show

and teeth they don't—the difference lies in a new way to combat film

A new method of cleaning has brought prettier teeth to millions. Also cleaner, safer teeth.

You see the results wherever you look. Teeth now glisten which before were dim. They show in smiles now where folks once concealed them.

This is to tell you the reason, then to urge that you make a free test.

They remove the film

These millions have gained whiter teeth by simply combating film in this new way.

Film is that viscous coat you feel. It clings to teeth, gets between the teeth and stays. The ordinary tooth paste does not effectively combat it. The tooth brush, therefore, has left much of it intact.

Film absorbs stains, making the teeth look dingy. Film is the basis of tartar. That is why teeth become cloudy and discolored. And some teeth—like smokers' teeth—become badly stained.

Film holds food substance which ferments and forms acids. It holds the acids in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

Thus most tooth troubles are now traced to film. Those troubles have been constantly increasing for lack of a proper film combatant.

Now you can fight it

Dental science, after long research, has found two ways to fight film. Many careful tests have proved their efficiency. Authorities now advise them, and leading dentists half the world over are urging their adoption.

A scientific tooth paste has been perfected to comply with modern requirements. These two film combatants are embodied in it. So one may now attack that film twice a day at home.

The name of that tooth paste is Pepsodent.

Other new effects

The saliva contains two great tooth-protecting agents. One is a starch digestant. That is to digest starch deposits on teeth before they ferment and form acids. The other is alkali, to neutralize the acids which cause tooth decay.

Certain food elements will multiply those tooth-protecting factors. But modern diet often fails to supply those elements regularly. Authority, therefore, desires the tooth paste to apply that stimulation twice a day.

Pepsodent does that. It multiplies both the starch digestant and the alkalis in the saliva. Every application gives these natural tooth-protecting agents many-fold effects.

Means a new dental era

Old-time tooth pastes, based on soap and chalk, depress these factors in saliva. They reduce this tooth-protecting power on which so much depends. And they do not end the film.

So Pepsodent brings a new dental era to people who employ it. It brings five desired effects which old ways do not bring. So millions of people have come to adopt it, largely by dental advice.

One week will bring delightful changes

Pepsodent will quickly prove itself. The changes which you see and feel will very soon convince you.

Present the coupon this week for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coats disappear. Watch how every use leaves the mouth in fresh, alkaline condition.

One week will show you what this method means to you and yours. Go start the test today.

COLONIALS WIN SUNDAY CONTEST

Against Virginia Colored Giants at Fair Grounds By A 10 to 2 Score—Pitcher Proves Easy For Local Batsmen.

The Virginia Colored Giants made a long trip from Philadelphia to Kingston in the expectation of taking the long end of a ball game back with them Sunday but their plans went awry, and they went down to defeat by a 10 to 2 score.

Despite the apparent one-sided figures, it wasn't by any means a bad ball game. The colored players showed up well in the field, although charged with five errors, but their pitchers had the bad habit of getting themselves constantly in the hole by allowing the first man up to get on. In five of the Colonials eight innings the first batter reached first base and in four of the five innings the first hitter scored.

Some fine pinch hitting in the seventh saved the Giants a shut-out. Up to this time Bud Culloton had allowed but three hits, but in the seventh the Philadelphia aggregation bunched four hits for two runs. After Scott had gone out, Munzano, who played the entire game with a badly crippled hand, singled to left. Ferguson then straightened one out to Rice's domain. Johnson, pinch hitting for Simons, met the first ball Culloton served for a double to left, sending Munzano over with the visitors' first run, Ferguson reaching third. After Wallace went out on a fly to Schwab, Jacobs, who batted for White, shot a hot single through Deegan's territory and Ferguson reached the plate. That was the extent of the Philadelphia team's scoring, but one more hit being made off Culloton's delivery.

The Colonials also did their run-making in clusters of two, but the Kingston team didn't stop in one inning, sending two men all the way around in each of five frames. Some nice fielding on the part of the Giants' infield shut off the run-making in the first, but the Kingston team got going in the second.

Rice, who has been making a path around the base lines in the last few games, and Kid Moore, who is pacing him started it off, Rice taking first on four bad ones and going to second on the Kid's sacrifice. Culloton's drive was too hot for Deloach to handle and went for two bases, Rice coming home with the first run. Coyle's single to center sent Culloton over the platter.

Two more Colonial markers came in the fourth. Deegan was hit by a pitched ball, and Glaser reached first, and Deegan second when Munzano dropped Deloach's throw on Glaser's sacrifice. The bases were filled when Schwab sacrificed down the third base line. Rice came to the front again with a single to right and Deegan and Glaser romped home.

Deegan started the fifth with a hit to left and was sacrificed to second by Glaser. Schwab's high foul was gathered in by Rhone, but Deloach uncorked a wild pitch and Deegan reached home. The Rice-Moore combination got in its work again, Rice singling and going to third on Moore's hit. When White held the ball to see what the base-runners meant to do Rice beat his throw in home.

Still getting their runs in twos, the Colonials added numbers 7 and 8 in the sixth, this time without a hit to aid them. A base on balls, to Culloton started it off and Bud went to second on Fitzgerald's sacrifice. Coyle hit to Rhone, who bluffed a throw to second to catch Culloton but lost both runners. Deloach's throw to catch Bud off second was out on a sacrifice, but Deegan and Glaser waited Deloach out and went to first on four balls, Glaser's walk forcing Coyle over.

The last two came in the seventh with Ferguson in the box. Like Deloach Ferguson couldn't find the plate and three bases on balls and hits by Fitzgerald and Coyle gave the Kingston team two more scores.

Bill Schwab's wonderful one-hand jumping catch of a drive by Gibson in, the fourth, cutting off what looked like a sure triple, was the bright spot of the afternoon's work.

SUBWAY GIANTS A POOR CLUB

Put Up Such a Weak Game Saturday That Colonials Wouldn't Take Money From Fans—Colonials Make 23 Runs Without Half Trying.

The Subway Giants might be good ball players in the dark or by artificial light but Saturday afternoon at the Kingston Fair Grounds' diamond they were completely outclassed by the Colonials. The ability of the team with the underground name had so evidently been misrepresented by its manager that the management of the Colonials announced to the fans that the tickets for that game would be good for Sunday's contest.

If the game had been billed as "a side-splitting comedy, with a laugh guaranteed every minute," the fans who made their way to the Fair Grounds would have received much more than their money's worth. As it was, however, it was billed as a ball game, and when, after nine innings of hilarious baseball, the score finally computed, it was found that the Kingston team had 23 runs while the New Yorkers in some mysterious manner had annexed 5 for themselves.

One Ed Phelan, booking manager and catcher for the New York team, may be the goods when it comes to press-agenting, but it is a far different story when it comes to collecting a ball club. Ed brought two or three real ball players with him—Shean, who played second and was later shifted to right, Goodman, a real shortstop, and Poole, third baseman. As for the rest of the club, the less said the better. How they came to masquerade under the name of the Subway Giants is a mystery.

Phelan started a pitcher named Graham in the box, and it began to appear as if the first inning would never end. Hits, bases on balls, and errors sent five runners around the bases with only one out, and Boylan was switched from first to the box. Two more runners made the rounds before the next two men were retired, making a total of seven for the first frame. There was no more baseball to the game after that.

McAuliffe pitched the full nine innings for the Kingston team, but after the first frame it was simply in the nature of a workout for Mac. Six hits were gathered by the New Yorkers off McAuliffe's delivery, but they were widely scattered except in the fifth, when two hits were made in succession.

Cy Conners, former Colonial, got in the game for a few minutes in the ninth, when he relieved Fitzgerald in center field.

Treat the Stairs Kindly.

If, in ascending stairs, the foot is placed upon the step or tread with a sliding motion or "scuff," needless wear is brought upon the paint or finish, and the wood of the step, itself, for particles of sand or grit clinging to the shoe will grind through the paint and into the wood. Instead, the foot should be placed upon the step as though one were walking upon the ball of his foot, which causes the least wear upon the paint and wood of the step. In descending a flight of stairs, of which the treads or steps are narrow, if the toe be placed as close to the front of the step as safety permits, or if the body be in a sideways position, the risers will not be bruised by striking the heels against them.

Playing Cards at Christmas.

In olden times it was a custom to play cards at Christmas, and during the festive season ladies would travel some distance in order to "take a hand" with a friend. There are records which offer numerous examples of this custom, and relate how they went equipped with money for the chances of the game. Card-playing was the subject of special legislation. An act of the time of Henry VII, against unlawful games, forbade the working classes from playing cards except at Christmas. In many a lordly mansion cards and dice games were played for money during the "12 days of Christmas," and at no other season of the year.

Get Out and Get Busy.

The man who indulges in self-pity is a defeated man before the fight begins. There is no exercise of the human mind that is so debilitating, so fatal to heroic resolution, as that of nourishing the feeling that one has an impossible job, and is of all men most miserable. Have you a hard duty to perform? Perform it with resolution, and get it done, and encourage your soul with the glow of triumph. Who promised you an easy life? And who but a coward and a weakling cares for an easy life? Put on a smoke consumer and get out and get busy in the sunlight.—Exchange.

Philathea Class Concert.

The Philathea Class of the Wurts Street Baptist Church is fortunate in securing such artists as will appear at the concert Wednesday evening of this week in the auditorium of the church. The following is what one critic has to say of Mr. Jones, the baritone of the company: "The singing of Glyndwr Jones, baritone with the Dinevor Welsh Concert Company was the feature of the evening at the Baptist Temple. He has a voice of excellent quality — his technique and expression both show the work of a real artist."—W. D. McCurdy, associate pastor, Baptist Temple, Philadelphia.

NEGRO'S WOUNDS A PRIVATE AFFAIR

Officers Unable To Get "Gypsy Kid" To Tell of Two Days' Adventures During Which He Was Clouted With Brick and Stabbed Badly.

Sunday afternoon about 4 o'clock a hurry call came over the telephone to the sheriff's office at the court house to send officers at once to East Kingston as there had been a negro stabbed. Sheriff Kolts, Under-sheriff Tunis Haulenbeck and Deputy Seth Jocelyn made a quick trip by auto and State Troopers Lounsbery and Kelly who have headquarters at Andrew Kohl's hotel at Katrine went to East Kingston in Mr. Kohl's touring car.

The sheriff and officers learned that a negro brickyard hand aged about 30, known as "Gypsy Kid," employed at Lynch's brickyard, had receiveda deep knife stab and cut on his left chest. Dr. John Larkin was summoned by the officers and sewed up the wound that had been made earlier in the day. The negro had refused to have a doctor sent for and the others had heeded his request.

The "Gypsy Kid," was questioned by the sheriff and his officers and also the cutting but he firmly refused to tell, saying he did not know who it was, although told that the wound might result in causing his death. He said he had no fear of dying from the cut and none of the other negroes would tell who did the cutting nor hint whether there had been a fight.

Saturday night "Gypsy Kid" was hit on the back of the head with a brick hurled by another negro and although he had received a bad bump and cut he did not seem to mind it.

The wounded man was left at the shack where he had been taken and it was thought nothing serious would result from the cutting.

OBJECTED TO BEING BROILED

Lobster's Emphatic Views on the Subject Led to Change of Menu in Household.

A friend of mine is very fond of lobster, but, like many men, has no idea how such food is prepared. His wife had occasion to be absent from home one day last week and she told the servant girl to broil a lobster for my friend's dinner. She left a note, telling her husband of the treat she had provided for him and requesting him not to wait dinner for her. He was quite hungry when he reached home and, after reading the note, said to the servant:

"Is that lobster ready?"

"No, sir, it isn't," said the girl.

"Well, hurry up with it. I'm as hungry as a bear," said he.

"I can't, sir," said the girl. "The mistress said to broil the lobster, and I got him on the gridiron, after a deal of a fuss. The more I poked the fire the more he walked off, and I thought the baste was haunted and no good would come from cooking a straddle bug like that."

"What did you do with it?" said my friend, getting mad.

"Faith, the last I saw of him he was going out the back door with his tail up, like the maniac he was!"

He had sardines for dinner.—Judge.

MR. JONES WALKED RIGHT BY

Little Incident May Have Cured Him of Habit of Loafing in That Grocery Store.

Mr. Jones (which is not his true name) enjoys, above all else, an opportunity to loaf at the corner grocery. Just to sit on the counter and think and talk while his wife is hard at work at home and the grocer and his clerk are hard at work in the store is to Jones a privilege well worth while.

But Mrs. Jones and the grocer thought differently. In fact the grocer disapproves emphatically of any person just sitting when he should be working. One morning the grocer conceived a brilliant idea. Just as Mr. Jones was about to leap lightly to his seat on the counter the grocer slyly placed a sheet of fly paper, black with flies, on the spot where Mr. Jones was to land.

Mr. Jones did not discover the fly paper until he politely slid from the counter in order to greet with his best bow a neighbor woman. It is said he left the store thereon with such speed that the wind detached the fly paper from its place on the seat of his trousers. When next seen Jones wore his Sunday best and he walked right by the grocery store.—Indianapolis News.

Up to Date.

The great detective scowled thoughtfully. "Jack and Jill," he read from the report before him, "went up the hill to draw a pail of water. Jack fell down and broke his crown and Jill came tumbling after."

"Humph," said the master mind. "That seems to be simple enough. A plain case. These two joyriders found their radiator getting hot while speeding in a mountainous section. They tried to make a tough grade on low, but it was too much. Then the brakes refused to work. The man got panic-stricken and stumbled out of the car on his dome. The bus kept on going down the slope and took the dame along with it. Both of 'em carried accident policies and the car was probably insured, too. I advise both companies to suspend payment till the driver can prove he wasn't under the influence."—Life.

"The House of Lucky Wedding Rings"

June, the month of weddings, will soon be here. It seems to be a growing custom for the groom as well as the bride to wear a wedding ring. Men have, of course, worn wedding rings to a limited degree for many years, but the custom has never been universal. What is creating a new interest in the matter is apparently an outcome of the constitutional amendment providing for equality of the sexes in voting. This privilege has been rapidly followed by an assertion of independence in all directions, among them the insistence on the husband's wearing of engagement and wedding rings, and of the right of the prospective bride to buy and pay for them.

We have the "Lucky Wedding Rings" for both bride and groom to match from $5 up. All styles and all sizes in stock. Plain or engraved, platinum, green, white or yellow gold.

ALSO A BEAUTIFUL ASSORTMENT OF WEDDING GIFTS.

Every motorist wants to be first to get away when the traffic sign reads "Go." That's what makes driving close. The new Six seem to be announced is driven by a Continental "Red Seal" Motor developing an unusual amount of pulling power at ordinary driving speeds. That's what makes this car first in traffic. Every unit is built by a nationally known specialized manufacturer. That's what makes it a dependable Six. Yet it is sold for $985—the price of the average Four.
